7. OBJETIVO GENERAL DE LA ASIGNATURA

The course is a seminar at a postgraduate level. Its aim is to explore the main theoretical and empirical principles of the general linguistics areas known as Semantics and Pragmatics. The seminar has a specific focus on theoretical proposals, and their empirical foundations, in relation to:

- i. the way in which meaning is stored, structured, and processed in the language system of individuals
- ii. the way in which meaning is constructed in social interactions described in the field of pragmatics. Topics, proposals and supporting within evidence this area are discussed in relation to the semantic and pragmatic systems of the English language.

8. OBJETIVOS ESPECÍFICOS DE LA ASIGNATURA

Students in this course will develop the ability to

- Identify, interpret, and explain the main theoretical proposals in the fields of semantics and pragmatics

10. METODOLOGÍA

As part of this seminar, students must read scholarly publications including theoretical discussions and reports of original research. The ability to read texts written in English is essential to the course as all readings are originally written in this language. In addition, it is expected that students address tasks of observation/analysis of English L2 data from a semantic point of view.

The course has a seminar setting where the instructor presents a lecture and then posits some questions for discussion. After the class, readings are assigned and students are expected to read them and then post questions for the next class in relation to the topic of the readings.

11. METODOLOGÍAS DE EVALUACIÓN

The course considers one task to be evaluated. The task is an essay establishing and characterising a topic of interest to the student regarding the semantic description of English L2. The topic selected must be problematised and supported by data/ evidence that reflects the topic/problem identified.
